Student Insight

Predict the future based on the past

EMPOWERING THE WORLD OF EDUCATION

Identifying students who are at risk of dropping out, or who are not making the academic progress they are capable of, is challenging and is often based on a limited set of indicators, such as academic results. Student Insight helps education providers to predict student performance and identify potential “at-risk” students, so interventions can be made at an early stage.

Student interactions with education services, such as the library and virtual learning environments leave a digital footprint which can be used to assess how engaged the student is with their academic studies. Together with demographic data, assessment results and other information, this data can be used to predict the likelihood that a student is going to be academically successful and generate warnings for students who appear to be off track.

“We have nearly 20,000 students and much of the university operates in siloes. So you need to have intelligent ways to be able to spot the students who are struggling,”

University of Kent.

Staff can quickly identify students that are at risk of not completing their course. With access to information about all levels of student engagement, staff can see patterns, compare individuals to peers and identify issues, all of which improve the student experience and helps students to complete their course.
